BOY ROBS GRAVE

CONFESSES TO CRIME

Despoiled Lot of Woman Who Had Nursed Him Through Attack of Typhoid.

PHILADELPHIA, July 21 .- Theft of copper railing from the beautifully adorned lot of the Mary J. Drexel aconesses who have gone to the relarge of their devoted lives, is the me charged against James Clifford.
1901 Buttonwood street, now locked in the Seventeenth district station use. Especially reprehensible is his

North Capitol st. nw. as among the deaconesses R. him back to health in the home from a severe attack of typhoid fever. The y, for he is not over seventeen years old, attributes his base deed to the influence over him of another man.

Vandals Soon Caught.

When the fact that the grave had been desecrated by vandals, the flowers and shrubbery having been trampled on and the copper fencing torn partly Walker at once notified the police and boy and man had already been arrested in the act of carrying away the

The two prisoners confessed when a They had obtained access to the cemetery by crossing the Schuylkill in a rowboat from the wharf near the Arsenal bridge, where they hid the stolen copper, with the intention of selling it to junk dealers, as it has consid-

Carried Booty in Boat.

The cemetery is difficult of access at the point where they landed, so they een compelled to walk a considrable distance down the river till they tools to wrench the brass railing Their booty they threw over the the bank of the river below, where it

DIDN'T TEAR HIS COAT.

An old English gentleman, a school me of the small towns of Ohio, was an greeable teller of stories, but deemed beyond his reputation as a raconteur o tell one that did not surpass any hat preceded it, according to the Roch-ster Herald.

A farmer having come to the village smarked, in the presence of his friends, nat he had been plowing all the week ith four horses, breaking up new round, and dwelt upon it as being a ery big thing.

"Pshaw!" said the old Englishman, That's nothing. I have seen in Engund fifty yoke of oxen hitched to one low."

a, ran into and split a big oak stump, plow passed safely through the but before the plowman got eny through it closed up and caught by the coat tail."

Jud it tear his coat?" asked a person particles turn.

of inquiring turn,
"Not a bit of it," replied our veraplous narrator, "he hung on to the plow handles and pulled out the stump."
